

IRS TAX TIP 2002-34

ROTH IRAS

Confused about whether you can contribute to a Roth IRA? The IRS suggests checking these simple rules:

Income:

To contribute to a Roth IRA, you must have compensation (i.e. wages, salary, tips, professional fees, bonuses). Your modified adjusted gross income must be less than:

$160,000	Married Filing Jointly.
$10,000	Married Filing Separately (and you lived with your spouse at any time during the year).
$110,000	Single, Head of Household, or Married Filing Separately (and you did not live with your spouse during the year).

Age:

There is no age limitation for Roth IRA contributions. Unlike traditional IRAs, you can be any age and still qualify to contribute to a Roth IRA.

Contribution Limits:

In general, if your only IRA is a Roth IRA, the maximum 2001 contribution limit is the lesser of $2,000 or your taxable compensation. This limit will be $3,000 for 2002 through 2004, and will be $3,500 for those age 50 or over.

The maximum contribution limit phases out if your modified adjusted gross income is within these limits:

$150,000 - $160,000	Married Filing Jointly
$0 - $10,000	Married Filing Separately (and you lived with your spouse at any time during the year)
$95,000 - $110,000	Single, Head of Household, or Married Filing Separately (and you did not live with your spouse)

Contributions to Spousal Roth IRA:

You can make contributions to a Roth IRA for your spouse provided you meet the income requirements.

When to Make Contributions?

Contributions to a Roth IRA can be made at any time during the year or by the due date of your return for that year (not including extensions).
