ORDER GRANTING COMPLAINANT’S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

I. Factual and Procedural Background

On June 29, 2010, Complainant Karen L. Hawkins, in her official capacity as Director of the Office of Professional Responsibility (“OPR”), United States Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service (“IRS”), initiated this proceeding by issuing a Complaint against Respondent Donald J. Petrillo pursuant to 31 U.S.C. § 330 and Section 10.60 of the Regulations Governing the Practice of Attorneys before the IRS, codified at 31 C.F.R. Part 10 (“Rules”).¹

The Complaint alleges that Respondent is an attorney engaged in practice before the IRS (as defined by 31 C.F.R. § 10.2(a)(4) and sets forth thirteen (13) counts of violation against him. Specifically, the Complaint alleges that Respondent failed to file his 2007 Federal individual income tax return, failed to timely file his six 2001-2006 income tax returns, and failed to pay his 2001-2006 federal income taxes.² The Complaint alleges further that Respondent’s failure to file or timely file his federal income tax returns and pay his Federal income tax was willful and constitutes disreputable conduct, as defined by 31 C.F.R. § 10.51.³ As sanction therefor, the Complaint seeks to have Respondent disbarred from practice before the IRS pursuant to 31 C.F.R. §§ 10.50 and 10.70, with reinstatement thereafter being at the sole discretion of OPR. The Complaint further specifies that, at a minimum, reinstatement should not be granted unless Respondent has paid all taxes owed or complies with an installment agreement or compromise agreement.

² Odd numbered counts from 1 to 13 are for failure to timely file returns for tax years 2001 through 2007. Even numbered counts from 2 to 12 are for failure to pay taxes for years 2001 through 2006.

On July 30, 2010, Respondent, through his attorney, filed his Answer to the Complaint. Respondent's Answer did not deny the allegations in the Complaint that he failed to properly file his returns and pay his Federal income tax. However, the Answer did assert that "Respondent's failure to timely file and pay was not the result of willful conduct; but rather due to medical, factual and financial circumstances beyond the control of respondent." Answer ("Ans."), ¶¶ 6, 9, 12, 15, 18, 21, 24, 27, 30, 33, 36, 39 and 42.

A Prehearing Order was issued August 2, 2010, requiring each party to submit a Prehearing Memorandum by a certain date. Pursuant to the Prehearing Order, Complainant filed a Prehearing Memorandum on August 24, 2010.⁴ However, Respondent failed to file his Prehearing Memorandum by the date specified in the Prehearing Order. Thus, on August 31, 2010, the undersigned issued an Order to Show Cause to Respondent regarding his failure and inquiring why a default judgment should not be entered against him. On September 7, 2010, Respondent responded to this Tribunal's Order to Show Cause, noting that his counsel's office had mishandled the Prehearing Order and failed to properly calendar it. Respondent then filed his Prehearing Memorandum on September 21, 2010.

On August 27, 2010, Complainant filed a Motion to Depose Respondent and Extend Summary Judgment Deadline. That Motion was granted by an Order issued September 15, 2010 and the deposition was held on September 28, 2010. In September 2010, the parties also filed a set of Joint Stipulated Facts, Exhibits & Testimony. Subsequently, due to the unavailability of its only witness, Complainant filed on September 27, 2010, an Unopposed Motion for Continuance, which was also granted by an Order of this Tribunal, changing the hearing date from October 26, 2010, to November 30, 2010.

On October 7, 2010, Complainant filed a Motion for Summary Judgment ("Motion" or "Mot"). Respondent filed a response to the Motion for Summary Judgment on October 12, 2010.

II. Standards for Summary Adjudication

The Rules provide that "[e]ither party may move for a summary adjudication upon all or any part of the legal issues in controversy," and that if the non-moving party files no response to a motion, "the non-moving party is deemed to oppose the motion" and therefore the Motion must be determined on its merits. 31 C.F.R. §§ 10.68(a) (2), 10.68(b). The Rules provide further that “[a] decision shall thereafter be rendered if the pleadings, depositions, admissions and any other admissible evidence show that there is no genuine issue of material fact and that a decision may be rendered as a matter of law.” 31 C.F.R. § 10.76(a) (2).

A motion for summary adjudication is analogous to a motion for summary judgment under Rule 56 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure (“FRCP”). Therefore, federal court rulings on motions under Rule 56 of the PRCP provide guidance for ruling on a motion for summary adjudication in an administrative proceeding. See Puerto Rico Sewer and Aqueduct Authority v. EPA, 35 F.3d 600, 607 (1st Cir. 1994) (holding that Rule 56 of the FRCP “is the prototype for administrative summary judgment procedures. and the jurisprudence that has grown up around Rule 56 is, therefore, the most fertile source of information about administrative summary judgment.”), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1148 (1995).

The party moving for summary judgment bears the initial burden of showing the absence of any genuine issues of material fact. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323 (1986). Once the moving party has met its initial burden, the non-moving party “may not rely merely on allegations or denials” in its pleadings but “must set out specific facts showing a genuine issue for trial.” FRCP 56(e)(2). If the non-moving party “does not so respond, summary judgment should, if appropriate, be entered against that party.” Id.

In evaluating a motion for summary judgment, the tribunal must view the record in a light most favorable to the non-moving party, indulging all reasonable inferences in that party’s favor. Griggs-Ryan v. Smith, 904 F.2d 112, 115 (1st Cir. 1990). The record to be considered by the tribunal includes any material that would be admissible or usable at trial. Horta v. Sullivan, 4 F.3d 2, 8 (1st Cir. 1993), citing 10A Charles A. Wright, Arthur R. Miller, and Mary Kay Kane, Federal Practice and Procedure § 2721, at 40 (2d ed. 1983). However, the burden of coming forward with evidence in support of their respective positions remains squarely upon the litigants. See Northwestern Nat’l Ins. Co. v. Baltes, 15 F.3d 660, 662-63 (7th Cir. 1994) (“[J]udges are not archaeologists. They need not excavate masses of papers in search of revealing tidbits - not only because the rules of procedure place the burden on the litigants, but also because their time is scarce.”).

III. Relevant Statutes, Regulations and Standards

At all times relevant hereto, Section 330(b) of Title 31 of the United States Code has provided that -

After notice and opportunity for a proceeding, the Secretary [of the Treasury] may suspend or disbar from practice before the Department [] a representative who-

(2) is disreputable[.]

31 U.S.C. § 330(b) (2). See also, 31 C.F.R. § 10.50 (2001, 2002) (“Pursuant to 31 U.S.C. 330(b), the Secretary of the Treasury after notice and an opportunity for a proceeding, may suspend or disbar any practitioner from practice before the Internal Revenue Service. The Secretary may take such action against any practitioner who is shown to be incompetent or disreputable ...); 31 C.F.R. § 10.50(a) (2003-2007) (The Secretary of the Treasury, or his or her delegate, after notice and an opportunity for a proceeding, may censure, suspend or disbar any practitioner from practice before the Internal Revenue Service if the practitioner is shown to be incompetent or disreputable ...); 31 C.F.R. § 10.50(a) (2008) (“ The Secretary of the Treasury, or delegate, after notice and an opportunity for a proceeding, may censure, suspend, or disbar any practitioner from practice before the Internal Revenue Service if the practitioner is shown to be incompetent or disreputable (within the meaning of § 10.51) “).

The term “disreputable” is not defined in the statute, however examples of disreputable conduct are included in the set of regulations promulgated in connection therewith, known as “Circular 230,” set forth at 31 C.F.R. Part 10 (§§ 10.0-10.93). Such regulations, initially enacted in 1936, have been amended from time to time. In regard to the violations set forth in Counts 1 and 2 as to tax year 2001, the definition of disreputable conduct in the version of Circular No. 230 in effect from June 20, 1994 until July 25, 2002 applies (hereinafter referred to as the “1994 Regulations”). See, 59 Fed. Reg. 31523-29 (June 20, 1994). As to the violations set forth in Counts 3-12 pertaining to tax years 2002-2006, the definition in the regulations in effect for the period July 26, 2002 until September 25, 2007 applies (hereinafter referred to as the “2002 Regulations”). See, 67 Fed. Reg. 48760-80 (July 26, 2002). In regard to the 2007 violation set out in Count 13, the definition in the regulations effective beginning September 26, 2007 applies (hereinafter referred to as the “2007 Regulations”). See, 72 Fed. Reg. 54540-55 (Sept. 26, 2007).

In the 1994 Regulations, Section 10.51 thereof provides in pertinent part that:

Disreputable conduct for which an attorney ... may be disbarred or suspended from practice before the Internal Revenue Service includes, but is not limited to:

* * *

(d) Willfully failing to make [sic] Federal tax return in violation of the revenue laws of the United States, or evading, attempting to evade, or participating in any way in evading or attempting to evade any Federal tax or payment thereof ... or concealing assets of himself or another to evade Federal taxes or payment thereof;

31 C.F.R. § 10.51(d) (1994).

In the 2002 Regulations, the subsection above (10.51(d)) was reordered as 10.51(f) and revised to provide in pertinent part as follows:

(f) Willfully failing to make a Federal tax return in violation of the revenue laws of the United States, willfully evading, attempting to evade, or participating in any way in evading or attempting to evade any assessment or payment of any Federal tax...

31 C.F.R. § 10.51 (f) (2003).

In the 2007 Regulations, subsection 10.51(f) was recast as 10.51(a) (6) and revised to read as follows:

(6) Willfully failing to make a Federal tax return in violation of the Federal tax laws, or willfully evading, attempting to evade, or participating in any way in evading or attempting to evade any assessment or payment of any Federal tax.

31 C.F.R. § 10.51(a) (6) (2007).

Thus, at all times relevant hereto, disreputable conduct included “willfully” failing to file one’s tax returns and “evading” or “willfully evading” assessment or payment of one’s taxes.

In determining the penalty for engaging in disreputable conduct, the regulations currently provide that “[t]he sanction imposed ... shall take into account all relevant facts and circumstances.” 31 C.F.R. § 10.50(d)(2010) (italics added). The regulations, however, do not provide any guidance as to what facts and circumstances are relevant or any standards for determining when it would be appropriate to impose one particular sanction (censure, suspension or disbarment) rather than another.

Finally, as to the standard of proof required in disciplinary cases, the applicable regulation states in pertinent part that—

If the sanction is a monetary penalty, disbarment or a suspension of six months or longer duration, an allegation of fact that is necessary for a finding against the practitioner must be proven by clear and convincing evidence in the record.

31 C.F.R. § 10.76 (2010).

IV. Complainant’s Summary Judgment Motion

Complainant asserts that Respondent has engaged in disreputable conduct, as a matter of law, because there are no genuine issues of material fact regarding Respondent’s failure to timely file his 2001-2006 tax returns, failure to file his 2007 Federal individual income tax return, and failure to pay his 2001-2006 taxes. Mot. at 1. Complainant further asserts that there is no genuine issue of material fact as to disbarment being the appropriate legal remedy. Mot. at 20.

In support thereof, Complainant cites to and attaches to its Motion certified IRS transcripts regarding Respondent’s tax activity for the years 2001 through 2007, noting that Respondent has admitted to the alleged violations shown therein in his Answer. Mot., Attachment 2; Mot. at 1. Those IRS transcripts reflect (a) that Respondent failed to timely file his Federal income tax returns for tax years 2001-2006 (Mot., Attachment 2, pp. 2-13); (b) that, as of June 24, 2010, Respondent had not filed his Federal income tax return for 2007 (Mot., Attachment 2, pp. 14-15); and (c) that Respondent had failed to pay his Federal individual income taxes for years 2001 through 2006 (Mot., Attachment 2, pp. 2-13).⁵ Respondent admitted the information reflected in the transcripts in his Answer to the Complaint. See, Ans. ¶¶ 5, 11, 17, 23, 29, 35 (as to untimely filing for years 2001-2006), Ans. ¶ 41 (as to non-filing for tax year 2007), and Ans. ¶¶ 8, 14, 20, 26, 32, 38 (as to non-payment of taxes).

Additionally, for purposes of the Summary Judgment Motion, Complainant states that it is not disputing the existence or seriousness of the circumstances or illnesses alleged by Respondent in his Answer. Mot. at 4. However, Complainant asserts that, despite Respondent's divorce and illnesses, numerous facts elicited from Respondent's deposition testimony prove that Respondent's Federal tax failures were nevertheless "willful" These include: Respondent's acknowledgment that there was never a time when he was not capable of and did not in fact prepare tax returns for family and friends (Depo., at 14: 16-18); Respondent's admission that for the years in issue (i.e., 2001-2007) he prepared tax returns for other people and/or performed legal work for clients (Id., at 19: 16-20; 1,27:5-12,60:8-61: 1,68:7-14, 79:3-11, 82:20-83:2, 86:2-10); and Respondent's current paid and volunteer legal work, including a $4,000 per month retainer (Id., at 5:12-6:20, 8:9-9:6, 9:9-15). Further, during the period Respondent failed to file and pay taxes as alleged in the Complaint, Respondent paid for the following significant expenditures: tuition, books, room and board for his two daughters to attend college and a technical school (Id., at 21:3-17, 22:3-15,22:21-24:2); cars and automobile insurance for his three children (Id., at 22:21-23:6, 65:12-67:9); a Yamaha motor scooter (Id., at 105:6-21); and a 2001 BMW convertible car (Id., at 105:22-106:4). "Furthermore, in the Fall of 2003 - during the time period Respondent claims to have been the most incapacitated - he contracted to build a new house and purchased the house when it was completed." Mot. at 5, citing Depo., at 58: 15- 59: 19. Respondent also, during this period, provided funds to help a friend buy a sport utility vehicle. Depo., at 108:3-11. "All of these facts show an ongoing pattern of Respondent preferring to spend money on things that would give him personal satisfaction, rather than on his taxes." Mot. at 16. Complainant argues that Respondent's willful failures to timely file his federal tax returns and pay his taxes constitute "disreputable conduct" under 31 C.F.R. § 10.51.

Furthermore, acknowledging that the applicable regulations do not specifically define what it meant by the term "evade," Complainant nevertheless construes Respondent's failure to pay taxes for six consecutive years as "evasion" under 31 C.F.R. § 10.51. Mot. at 14. In support thereof, Complainant quotes a Webster's Dictionary definition of "evade" and cites several Federal Circuit Court decisions involving similar evasion language under 26 U.S.C. § 6672 (pertaining to failures to pay withheld federal employment taxes) which hold that tax payments were evaded when the tax debts were not paid while other creditors were paid. Complainant argues that "because Respondent failed to pay taxes known to be owed, while choosing to pay others in lieu of paying his taxes over a meaningful period of time, the standard of willful evasion has been met in this case." Mot. at 16.

As to sanction, Complainant requests that Respondent be disbarred from practicing before the IRS, asserting that a hearing is unnecessary to impose this sanction. In support thereof, Complainant makes the following arguments: "The Director of OPR is the official with responsibility for regulating practice before the IRS; therefore, her proposed sanction is entitled to deference." Mot. at 17. Respondent's failure to comply with his tax obligations for six years "shows a long-term pattern of serious, willful noncompliance." Id. Respondent's alleged medical and financial problems in 2003 do not merit mitigation of the sanction, as the violations occurred over a much broader time period. Many persons experience divorce or other emotionally distressing experiences, yet are still expected to comply with their tax obligations. Id., at 18. Allowing tax practitioners to evade their own tax obligations without appropriate sanctions could set an example that could undermine the system of voluntary tax compliance for both tax practitioners and other taxpayers. Id. "Surely the IRS cannot be expected to retain the faith of the taxpaying public in its integrity if those who are allowed to practice before it are themselves repeated violators of its most basic rules In order to adequately remedy Respondent's disreputable conduct, and sufficiently discourage others from similar disreputable conduct, permanent disbarment is warranted." Id., at 19.

Complainant buttresses its position as to the sanction by citing several cases that either imposed disbarment, or found that disbarment would be appropriate, for fewer failures to file tax returns than the seven committed by Respondent Petrillo. See, Hubbard v. United States, 545 F. Supp.2d 1 (D.D.C. 2008) (IRS practitioner disbarred for failure to file both individual and business tax returns for four years); Dir., OPR v. Liorente, IRS Complaint No. 2008-03, <http://www.irs.gov/taxpros/actuarities/article/0,,id=183923,00.html> (Decision on Appeal, Apr. 10, 2009) (practitioner disbarred for failure to file or timely file his personal Federal income tax returns for 5 years; "When confronted by a pattern of willful failures to file personal Federal income tax returns extending over five years, I have uniformly imposed a sanction of disbarment."); Dir., OPR v. Koenig, IRS Complaint No. 2008-19, <http://www.irs.gov/taxpros/actuarities/article/0,,id=183923,00.html> (Decision on Appeal, May 26, 2010)(practitioner's failure to file or timely file returns for five years supported disbarment, but Appellate Authority deferred to OPR's requested sanction of 48-month suspension); Dir., OPR v. Kilduff, IRS Complaint No. 2008-12, <http://www.irs.gov/taxpros/actuarities/article/0,,id=183923,00.html> (Decision on Appeal, Jan. 20, 2010)(found that failure to file one return and failure to timely file five returns warranted disbarment, but deferred to OPR's requested sanction of 48-month suspension).

"In addition, this is not the first time Respondent has failed to meet his tax obligations," Complainant asserts. "He was previously suspended from January 1993 to September 1997 because of violation of 31 C.F.R. § 10.51(d)." Mot., at 17-18, citing Depo., 95: 15-96:4.

IV. Respondent's Response to Complainant's Motion

On October 12, 2010, Respondent filed a brief three page Response to Complainant's Summary Judgment Motion ("Response" or "Resp.") in which he makes the following arguments:

First, "Respondent contends that a genuine dispute exists with respect to the characterization and impact of the referenced medical and personal events, and resulting psychological impact on the specific individual in this case. Each individual has a particular and unique response to a trying condition or period and/or series of negative events. Further, the ability to manage others['] business and financial affairs does not necessarily comport with or reflect the ability to handle one's own similar affairs - especially in the midst of protracted trying events." Resp. at 1. Respondent suggests that "[t]he trier of fact should be allowed to observe and examine the testimony of the respondent and his witnesses in furtherance of the impact of the referenced disabilities on the alleged voluntary aspect of 'willfulness' ... and whether Respondent willfully failed to pay his taxes, or in the alternative, was waiting for the opportunity to become financially capable of making such an arrangement." Resp. at 2.

Second, "even though Respondent would ostensibly have qualified for an attractive and significantly discounted Offer in Compromise for a significant portion of the period of disability, Respondent chose to wait until he was fully on his financial feet before entering into an installment agreement to pay the full balance of tax owed." Id.

Third, Respondent asserts that disbarment is overly punitive. Respondent cites Dir., OPR v. Gonzales, IRS Complaint No. 2007-28, <http://www.irs.gov/taxpros/actuaries/article/0,,id=183923,00.html> (ALJ, June 2008)(Decision Granting Complainant's Motion for Summary Judgment), appeal dismissed, <http://www.irs.gov/taxpros/actuaries/article/0,,id=183923,00.html> (Decision on Appeal, Dec. 9, 2009), where a penalty of only 36 months suspension was imposed for failure to file and pay taxes from 2001 to 2005, even though respondent Gonzales was otherwise engaged in her own tax practice. Resp. at 3.

In sum, Respondent argues that a live fact-finding hearing is necessary to correct mischaracterizations of Respondent's personal difficulties and the issue of his willfulness in not timely filing and paying his federal taxes.

V. Discussion

A. Failing to File Tax Returns

It is undisputed in this case that Respondent did not timely file his tax returns for years 2001-2006. See. Mot. Attachment 2, pp. 2-13. Ans. ¶¶ 5, 11, 17, 23, 29, 35; and Stips. Nos. 5, 9, 13, 17, 21, 25 (indicating Respondent filed his 2001 and 2002 returns on April 13, 2006, filed his 2003 return on February 21, 2007, filed his 2004 return on August 1, 2007, and filed his 2005 and 2006 returns on January 7, 2008). Untimely filing a Federal income tax return has been held to constitute "failing to make a Federal tax return in violation of the revenue laws of the United States." Owrutsky v. Brady, No. 89-2402. 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 2613 (4th Cir. 1991)(italics added). Further, the record unequivocally establishes that Respondent has not yet filed his Federal individual income tax return for 2007. See, Mot. Attachment 2, pp. 14-15, Ans.¶ 41, Stip No. 27. Thus, for seven consecutive years Respondent "fail[ed] to make [a] Federal tax return in violation of the revenue laws of the United States," within the meaning of 31 C.F.R. § 10.51 (d), (f), or (a)(6), as applicable. As a result the only open question is whether there is a genuine issue of material fact as to whether such non-filing was "willful," as required by 10 C.F.R. § 10.51.

According to case law, "willfully" means "a voluntary, intentional violation of a known legal duty." Owrutsky v. Brady, No. 89-2402, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 2613 (4th Cir. 1991), citing United States v. Pomponio, 429 U.S. 10. 12 (1976)," Director, OPR v. Martin M. Chandler, C.P.A., IRS Complaint No. 2006-23, <http://www.irs.gov/taxpros/actuaries/article/0,,id=183923,00.html> (Decision on Appeal,. May 14. 2008). In this case, Respondent does not dispute that he knew of his duty to file his tax returns, but he does suggest that his non-filing was not "willful," i.e. voluntary, on the basis of his personal circumstances, specifically arising from his divorce and health conditions.⁶ Resp. at 2. However, the general rule of law is that, to be excused from liability for tax failures, a person's incapacity must be virtually complete, such that they are unable to conduct any work. Roberts Metal Fabrication v. United States. 147 B.R. 965, 968 (1992) (to find that an illness qualifies as "reasonable cause" for failure to file, "the illness must be present at the time the return is customarily prepared and must be of such a degree as to render the taxpayer physically or mentally incapable of preparing a return or conducting any business activity and the taxpayer must not conduct other business.”); Meyer v. Comm’r, 85 T.C.M. (CCH) 760 (2003)(taxpayer had severe health problems and nervous breakdown, took leave of absence from job); Shaffer v. Comm’r, 68 T.C.M. (CCH) 1455 (1994)(taxpayer placed on disability retirement); Dir., Office of Prof’l Responsibility v. Kaskey, IRS Complaint No. 2009-26, <http://www.irs.gov/taxpros/actuaries/article1/0,,id=183923,00.html> (Decision on Appeal, May 28, 2010)(where respondent prepared returns for other taxpayers, medical conditions did not excuse failure to file tax return).

As pointed out in Complainant’s Motion, despite Respondent’s divorce and illnesses, it is undisputed that during the seven year period when he did not timely file his own federal tax returns, Respondent was gainfully employed preparing tax returns for other people and representing clients in legal matters, and made decisions and contractual arrangements regarding a variety of expensive purchases, including a house and several automobiles. Further, the record shows that, during this time, Respondent was capable of and did request and obtain extensions to file his returns for some of the years at issue. Depo., pp. 4-9. Even taking Respondent’s assertions regard his personal circumstances as true, they would not support a finding that Respondent non-filings were involuntary or unintentional acts. Rather, the evidence clearly and convincingly establishes that there is no genuine issue of fact as to whether Respondent was mentally and/or physically capable of filing a tax return. He clearly was.⁷ Thus, Respondent’s failures to timely file his federal income tax returns for seven years are found to have been voluntary and intentional violations of a known legal duty and therefore “willful.” On such basis, Respondent is hereby found to have engaged in disreputable conduct under 10 C.F.R. 10.50, as defined by 10 C.F.R. § 10.51 and as alleged in Counts 1, 3, 5, 7, 9, 11, and 13.

B. Failure to Pay Taxes

Complainant’s Motion fails to cite any controlling authority defining what constitutes “evading, attempting to evade, or participating in any way in evading or attempting to evade any assessment or payment of any Federal tax” within the specific context of a professional disciplinary action brought under 31 C.F.R. § 10.51. Rather, the cases cited therein interpret 26 U.S.C. § 6672, a tax provision authorizing imposition of a civil penalty on an employer who “willfully attempts in any manner to evade or defeat” payment over of an employees’ withheld portion of employment taxes. Moreover, the cited cases seem to focus more on the word “willfully” than “evade.” For example, in Buffalow v. United States, 109 F.3d 570 (9th Cir. 1997), in quoting the statute, the Circuit Court actually omits from its quote the clause containing the word “evade.” Id., at 573.

This Tribunal is also unaware of any case law directly interpreting the term “evade” as used within § 10.51(a)(6), although there are many cases interpreting other tax law provisions containing the word “evade” or its cognates. Specifically, in the context of criminal felony (in contrast to a misdemeanor) tax evasion, language similar to that in 31 C.F.R. § 10.51 (a)(6) has been held to require an affirmative act of deception, beyond mere “passive” non-filing and non-payment. See e.g., Spies v. United States, 317 U.S. 492 (1943), Sansone v. United States, 380 U.S. 343 (1965). Similar distinctions have been made in certain civil contexts. See, e.g., First Trust & Sav. Bank v. United States, 206 F.2d 97.99 (8th Cir. 1953), Niedringhaus v. Commissioner, 99 T.C. 202, 210 (T.C. 1992). However, in other civil contexts, some courts have found that a willful (voluntary, conscious and intentional) failure to file and pay taxes, without an affirmative act or commission, can constitute tax evasion. See, e.g., United States v. Toti, 149 B.R. 829. 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 718 (E.D. Mich. 1993) (Under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(1)(C), bankruptcy does not discharge tax debts that debtor “willfully attempted in any manner to evade or defeat ...”). But see, Howard v. United States, 167 B.R. 684, 687, 1994 Bankr. LEXIS 721, 11-13 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1994) (proof of an affirmative act necessary to satisfy the 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(1)(C) willfulness requirement.).

However, this Tribunal need not address and resolve this evasion issue as it applies here. Even without considering Respondent’s alleged non-payment of tax, Respondent’s willful failure to file his tax returns for several consecutive years alone suffices to support the sanction imposed herein.

C. Sanction

The issue in a disbarment proceeding is essentially whether the practitioner in question is fit to practice. Harary v. Blumenthal, 555 F. 2d 1113, 1116 (2d Cir. 1977). Complainant’s Motion cites four cases either imposing disbarment, or finding that disbarment would be appropriate, for fewer years of failing to file tax returns than committed by Respondent Petrillo. See Hubbard v. United States, 545 F. Supp. 2d 1 (D.D.C. 2008) (IRS practitioner disbarred for failure to file both individual and business tax returns for four years); Dir., OPR v. Liorente, IRS Complaint No. 2008-03, <http://www.irs.gov/taxpros/actuaries/article/0?id=183923,00.html> (Decision on Appeal, Apr. 10, 2009) (practitioner disbarred for failure to file or timely file his personal Federal income tax returns for 5 years; “When confronted by a pattern of willful failures to file personal Federal income tax returns extending over five years, I have uniformly imposed a sanction of disbarment.”); Dir., OPR v. Koenig, IRS Complaint No. 2008-19, <http://www.irs.gov/taxpros/actuaries/article/0,id=183923,00.html> (Decision on Appeal, May 26, 2010)(practitioner’s failure to file or timely file returns for five years supported disbarment, but Appellate Authority deferred to OPR’s requested sanction of 48-month suspension); Dir., OPR v. Kilduff, IRS Complaint No. 2008-12, <http://www.irs.gov/taxprosiactuaries/article/0,id=183923,00.html> (Decision on Appeal, Jan. 20, 2010)(found that failure to file one return and failure to timely file five returns warranted disbarment, but deferred to OPR’s requested sanction of 48-month suspension).

In support of his position that a punishment of disbarment is “overly punitive and unwarranted,” Respondent cites Director, OPR v. Gonzales, Dir., IRS Complaint No. 2007-28, <http://www.irs.gov/taxpros/actuaries/article/0,id=83923,00.html> (ALJ, June 2008)(Decision Granting Complainant’s Motion for Summary Judgment), appeal dismissed, <http://www.irs.gov/taxpros/actuaries/article/0,id=183923,00.html> (Decision on Appeal, Dec. 9, 2009), where a penalty of only 36 months suspension was imposed for failure to file and pay taxes from 2001 to 2005, even though Respondent Gonzales was otherwise engaged in her own tax practice. However, this Tribunal notes that the facts of the Gonzales case were far more favorable to the practitioner than those here. In Gonzales, the Respondent had filed all the returns at issue prior to initiation of the disciplinary action, here Respondent still has not filed for 2007. In Gonzales, while two of the earliest returns in that case showed balances due, the three more recent returns reflected overpayments. In addition, there was no evidence in Gonzales of any prior disciplinary history, whereas Respondent Petrillo was previously suspended by the IRS for 4 1/2 years for not timely paying his taxes. Mot., Attachment 1, pp. 95-96. Finally, even with those more favorable circumstances, Appellate Authority in Gonzales stated, in dictum: “I find the failure to timely file income tax returns for five consecutive years to be a very serious offense. If this case were not being dismissed [upon the grounds of the appeal being untimely filed], I would give serious consideration to imposing the 48 month suspension requested by the Director of the Office of Professional Responsibility.” Director, OPR v. Gonzales, Complaint No. 2007-28. <http://www.irs.gov/taxpros/actuaries/article/0,,id=183923,00.html>, (Decision on Appeal, Dec. 9, 2009).⁸

In this case, even taking as true and crediting to the fullest extent possible all the mitigating circumstances which can be drawn from the record as to Respondent’s health and marital circumstances as a result of which he “endured a significant period of emotional and physical trauma” from which he now claims he has “emerged” and “is on the path to fulfilling his truant obligations,” that he has supportive friends and clients, his extended career and charitable work, such circumstances would not be sufficient to mitigate the penalty of disbarment in this case because of (a) the length of time Respondent failed to timely file his tax returns;⁹ (b) his prior recent history of disciplinary action; and (c) his current lack of compliance with the filing requirements, all of which are not in dispute. As indicated by the cases cited by Complainant and others, it has been held that disbarment is the appropriate sanction under far more favorable circumstances than presented here. As such, holding oral hearing on the issue of penalty is found unnecessary.

Practice before the IRS is a privilege, and one cannot partake of that privilege without also taking on the responsibilities of complying with the regulations that govern such practice. Disbarment and suspension are imposed in furtherance of the IRS’ regulatory duty to protect the public interest and the Department by conducting business with responsible persons only. Failing failure [sic] to discharge known obligations over an extended period shows a disregard for the standards established for the benefit of the IRS and the public. Poole v. United States, No. 840300, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15351, *8 (D.D.C. June 29, 1984) (disbarring a certified public accountant for failure to file tax returns for three consecutive years, stating “willful failure to file tax returns, in violation of Federal revenue laws, in [sic] dishonorable, unprofessional, and adversely reflects on the petitioner’s fitness to practice. This is particularly true in a tax system whose very effectiveness depends upon voluntary compliance.”). See also, Owrutsky v. Brady, No. 89-2402, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 2613 (4th Cir. 1991)(attorney disbarred from practice before the IRS for failing to file timely tax returns for six consecutive years, even though he obtained refunds or had no tax liability for any of those years).

Therefore, it is hereby found the sanction of disbarment is commensurate with the seriousness of the disreputable conduct found.

VI. Conclusions

With regard to Respondent's liability for engaging in disreputable conduct by willfully failing to timely file Federal tax returns in violation of the Federal tax laws as alleged in the Complaint, Complainant has carried its burden of demonstrating that no genuine issues of material fact exist, and that Complainant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law on Counts 1, 3, 5, 7, 9, 11, and 13. No judgment is entered with regard to the remaining Counts.

It is concluded that disbarment is an appropriate sanction to impose against Respondent for the violations found herein.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that:

1. Complainant's Motion for Summary Judgment is GRANTED;
2. Respondent is hereby found to have engaged in disreputable conduct within the meaning of 31 C.F.R. 10.50 as alleged in Counts 1, 3, 5, 7, 9, 11, and 13 of the Complaint; and therefore,
3. Respondent DONALD J. PETRILLO, is hereby DISBARRED from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, with reinstatement to practice thereafter at the sole discretion of the Director of the Office of Professional Responsibility.
