WASHINGTON -- Confused about whether you can contribute to a Roth IRA? The IRS suggests checking these simple rules:

Income:
To contribute to a Roth IRA, you must have compensation (i.e. wages, salary, tips, professional fees, bonuses). Your modified adjusted gross income must be less than:
- $160,000 - Married filing jointly.
- $10,000 - Married filing separately (and you lived with your spouse at any time during the year).
- $110,000 - Single, Head of Household, or Married filing separately (and you did not live with your spouse during the year).

Age:
There is no age limitation for Roth IRA contributions. Unlike traditional IRAs, you can be any age and still qualify to contribute to a Roth IRA.

Contribution Limits:
In general, if your only IRA is a Roth IRA, the maximum yearly contribution limit is the lesser of $2,000 or your taxable compensation.

The maximum contribution limit phases out if your modified adjusted gross income is within these limits:
- $150,000 - $160,000 - Married filing jointly
- $0 - $10,000 - Married filing separately (and you lived with your spouse at any time during the year)
- $95,000 - $110,000 - Single, Head of Household, or Married filing separately (and you did not live with your spouse)

Contributions to Spousal Roth IRA:
You can make contributions to a Roth IRA for your spouse provided you meet the income requirements.

When to Make Contributions?
Contributions to a Roth IRA can be made at any time during the year or by the due date of your return for that year (not including extensions).
