Note: The amount listed in box 2 is the amount of dividends listed in box 1 which qualify for the $100 dividend exclusion ($200 if married filing jointly). If the amount in box 2 is less than $100 ($200 if married) and both spouses own the stock on which the dividends are being paid, then you do not qualify for the entire deduction. If both you and your spouse had dividend income from jointly or separately owned stock, you may each subtract up to $100 of dividend income even if you file a joint return. However, neither of you can use any part of the $100 exclusion not used by the other in the case of stock owned separately.

For example, if you had $300 in dividends and your spouse had $20, only $120 may be subtracted. If all of the stock on which the $320 of dividends was received had been held jointly, then you and your spouse could subtract $200 ($100 each).

The entire amount in box 1 must be reported as dividend income.

Note: The amount listed in box 2 is the amount of dividends listed in box 1 which qualify for the $100 dividend exclusion ($200 if married filing jointly). If the amount in box 2 is less than $100 ($200 if married) and both spouses own the stock on which the dividends are being paid, then you do not qualify for the entire deduction.
