

David Olsen

Dave Olsen is a CPA currently residing in Kennesaw Georgia. He began his career in the accounting industry with a local CPA firm in Maine in 1980, becoming a partner in 1986. He spent 15 years in public practice concentrating in tax and management consulting practice. He served in leadership roles in the Maine Society of CPAs and on the AICPA Council. Years spent serving small business clients as an advisor and tax consultant, including numerous occasions involving tax audits and controversies, gave him an appreciation for the practical challenges of tax compliance.

In addition to extensive experience in public practice, Dave also spent a number of years in industry as CFO of a start-up agri-business company. Facing the challenges of rounds of multi-million dollar equity and debt funding, establishing company systems and reporting processes, and managing customer, partner and vendor relationships added the dimension of an inside view of the challenges facing America's business enterprises.

Dave has spent the last 10 years in the tax and accounting software industry. He currently serves as Director of Product Management for CCH Small Firm Services, a business unit of Wolters Kluwer Tax and Accounting. Focused on matching efficient and creative solutions to the needs of practitioners throughout the country, Dave devotes himself to applying a user's point of view in bringing solutions to the tax and accounting industry.

Dave continues his involvement in contributing to industry leadership. He currently serves on the IRS Electronic Tax Administration Advisory Committee (ETAAC) and the board of the Council for Electronic Revenue Communication Advancement (CERCA).
