The HCTC Customer Contact Center will close February 28, 2014.

After this date, support will be available, but with an extended wait time. Please reach out with any questions as soon as possible and visit the Contact Us page for the most up-to-date information.

You received this final email because you are a valuable HCTC partner. If you would like to unsubscribe from future mailings, click here.

Final words from the HCTC Program January 2014

The Health Coverage Tax Credit expired January 1, 2014.

The legislation that authorized the Health Coverage Tax Credit (HCTC) expired January 1, 2014, and the tax credit is not available for tax years after 2013.

Continue transmitting backdated eligibility for 2013.

It is extremely important that you continue communicating with the IRS regarding the eligibility of an individual who is receiving TAA, ATAA/RTAA, or PBGC benefits. The 2013 eligibility records will be used to verify who is eligible to claim the HCTC on their 2013 federal income tax return. The HCTC Program will retain eligibility updates and deletions that affect the 2013 tax year filing season, but will disregard any eligibility records for months in 2014.

Effective April 15, 2014, the IRS will no longer accept electronically submitted eligibility records. A manual, secure fax-based submission process must be followed to communicate any outstanding 2013 eligibility records after that time. Details on this process will be sent via email at a later date and uploaded to our “How to Transmit Eligibility” page.

Thank you for your support.

The Health Coverage Tax Credit was a valuable tax credit that helped many families maintain health coverage over the years. We deeply value the support you have given our program and its participants. On behalf of the HCTC Program and its participants, we would like to extend a heartfelt thanks for your hard work and support over the years.

Thank you,
The HCTC Program
