Issue and Transaction Overview

U.S. Persons Residing Abroad Claiming Additional Child Tax Credit

Taxpayers residing abroad are filing returns claiming refundable credits, such as the Additional Child Tax Credit. These taxpayers have often never resided or resided only for a short period of time in the U.S. and some have no plans to return to the U.S.

Some of these taxpayers are only filing a U.S. return to get the refundable credits. In a significant number of instances, the taxpayers are not entitled to the credits because the "qualifying" children were not U.S. persons during the years at issue and/or income was misstated. Therefore, the examiner needs to be aware of the issues and ascertain whether the taxpayers are or are not entitled to the claimed credits.

Issues addressed in this Practice Unit include determining whether the taxpayers are U.S. persons, proper filing status, whether children listed as dependents are qualifying for purposes of the Child Tax and Additional Child Tax Credits, whether income has been properly reported and that the claimed credits do not exceed the limitations.

For original or amended returns filed after December 18, 2015 (except for tax year 2015 returns), taxpayers may not retroactively claim the credit after issuance of a Social Security number (SSN) or individual taxpayer identification number (ITIN). Instead, the taxpayer(s) and qualifying child(ren) must have a valid SSN or ITIN that was issued on or before the due date for filing the return.

For taxable years beginning after December 31, 2015, taxpayers who improperly claim the credit are restricted from claiming the credit in future years in a manner similar to that for improperly claiming the Earned Income Credit.

Transaction and Fact Pattern

U.S. Persons Residing Abroad Claiming Additional Child Tax Credit

Facts

- Taxpayer is residing outside the United States.
- Taxpayer filed a Form 1040, claiming the Child Tax Credit and/or Additional Child Tax Credit.
- Taxpayer (and/or spouse) may not be a United States person.
- Child(ren) claimed on the tax return may not be qualifying per Internal Revenue Code (IRC) 24(c).
- Income on the tax return may have been misclassified.
- Modified adjusted gross income for purposes of the credit may have been improperly computed.
- Earned income for purposes of the Additional Child Tax Credit may have been improperly computed.

Summary of Potential Issues

U.S. Persons Residing Abroad Claiming Additional Child Tax Credit

Issue 1	Determine if the taxpayer(s) is/are a United States person and, for any original or amended return filed after December 18, 2015 (except for tax year 2015 returns), the taxpayer has a valid Social Security number (SSN) or taxpayer identification number (TIN) that was issued on or before the due date of the return.
Issue 2	Determine if the filing status on Form 1040 is correct.
Issue 3	Determine if each child listed as dependent is a qualifying child per IRC 24(c), and for any original or amended return filed after December 18, 2015 (except for tax year 2015 returns), that each dependent has a valid SSN or TIN that was issued on or before the due date of the return.
Issue 4	Credits are limited based on modified adjusted gross income, per IRC 24. There are further limits on the refundable portion of the credit (also known as the Additional Child Tax Credit) based on taxable earned income as defined in IRC 32. Determine that modified adjusted gross income is the proper amount, and that the refundable portion of the credit does not exceed the limitations of IRC 24.

All Issues, Step 1: Initial Factual Development

U.S. Persons Residing Abroad Claiming Additional Child Tax Credit

Taxpayer(s) may be claiming Child Tax and/or Additional Child Tax Credits that are not allowable. It is necessary to determine the status for United States tax purposes of the taxpayer(s), whether the taxpayer has a valid Social Security number (SSN) or individual taxpayer identification number (ITIN) issued on or before the due date of the return, whether the child(ren) is/are qualifying child(ren) with a valid SSN or ITIN issued on or before the due date of the return, and whether the taxpayer(s) had earned income subject to the limitations of IRC 32.
