CERTIFIED MAIL

Dear _____ :

This is a final notice of adverse determination that your exempt status under section 501(c) (3) of the Internal Revenue Code is revoked. Recognition of your exemption under Internal Revenue Code section 501(c)(3) is retroactively revoked to April 1, 20XX for the following reason(s):

You have not been operated exclusively for an exempt purpose as required by Internal Revenue Code section 501(c)(3). You have not demonstrated that you primarily engage in activities which accomplish one or more of such exempt purposes specified in section 501(c)(3) as required by Treas. Reg. section 1.501(c)(3)-1(c)(1).

Contributions to your organization are no longer deductible effective April 1, 20XX.

Since your exempt status has been revoked, you are required to file Form 1120, U.S. Corporation Income Tax Return, for all years beginning on or after July 1, 20XX.

Income tax returns for subsequent years are to be filed with the appropriate Service Center identified in the instructions for those returns.

It is further determined that your failure to file a written appeal constitutes a failure to exhaust your available administrative remedies. However, if you decide to contest this determination in court, you must initiate a suit for declaratory judgment in the United States Tax Court, the United States Claims Court, or the district court of the United States for the District of Columbia before the (ninety-first) 91st day after the date that this determination was mailed to you. Contact the clerk of the appropriate court for rules for initiating suits for declaratory judgment. To secure a petition form, write to the following address:

Please understand that filing a petition for a declaratory judgment under IRC section 7428 will not delay the processing of subsequent income tax returns and assessment of any taxes due.

The last day for filing a petition for declaratory judgment is June 5, 20XX.

You also have the right to contact the Office of the Taxpayer Advocate. However, you should first contact the person whose name and telephone number are shown above since this person can access your tax information and can help you get answers. You can call and ask for the Taxpayer Advocate assistance or you can contact the Advocate from the site where this issue was determined by writing to:

Taxpayer Advocate assistance cannot be used as substitute for established IRS procedures, formal appeals processes, etc. The Taxpayer Advocate is not able to reverse legal or technically correct tax determination, nor extend the time fixed by law that you have to file a petition in Court. The Taxpayer Advocate can, however, see that a tax matter that may not have been resolved through normal channels gets prompt and proper handling.

This letter should be kept within your permanent records.

If you have any questions, please contact the person whose name and telephone number are shown above.

Sincerely,

Marsha A. Ramirez

Dear :

We have enclosed a copy of our report of examination explaining why we believe revocation of your exempt status under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code (Code) is necessary.

If you accept our findings, take no further action. We will issue a final revocation letter.

If you do not agree with our proposed revocation, you must submit to us a written request for Appeals Office consideration within 30 days from the date of this letter to protest our decision. Your protest should include a statement of the facts, the applicable law, and arguments in support of your position.

An Appeals officer will review your case. The Appeals office is independent of the Director, EO Examinations. The Appeals Office resolves most disputes informally and promptly. The enclosed Publication 3498, The Examination Process, and Publication 892, Exempt Organizations Appeal Procedures for Unagreed Issues, explain how to appeal an Internal Revenue Service (IRS) decision. Publication 3498 also includes information on your rights as a taxpayer and the IRS collection process.

You may also request that we refer this matter for technical advice as explained in Publication 892. If we issue a determination letter to you based on technical advice, no further administrative appeal is available to you within the IRS regarding the issue that was the subject of the technical advice.

Letter 3618 (04-2002)
Catalog Number 34809F

If we do not hear from you within 30 days from the date of this letter, we will process your case based on the recommendations shown in the report of examination. If you do not protest this proposed determination within 30 days from the date of this letter, the IRS will consider it to be a failure to exhaust your available administrative remedies. Section 7428(b)(2) of the Code provides, in part: "A declaratory judgment or decree under this section shall not be issued in any proceeding unless the Tax Court, the Claims Court, or the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia determines that the organization involved has exhausted its administrative remedies within the Internal Revenue Service." We will then issue a final revocation letter. We will also notify the appropriate state officials of the revocation in accordance with section 6104(c) of the Code.

You have the right to contact the office of the Taxpayer Advocate. Taxpayer Advocate assistance is not a substitute for established IRS procedures, such as the formal appeals process. The Taxpayer Advocate cannot reverse a legally correct tax determination, or extend the time fixed by law that you have to file a petition in a United States court. The Taxpayer Advocate can, however, see that a tax matter that may not have been resolved through normal channels gets prompt and proper handling. You may call toll-free 1-877-777-4778 and ask for Taxpayer Advocate Assistance. If you prefer, you may contact your local Taxpayer Advocate at:

If you have any questions, please call the contact person at the telephone number shown in the heading of this letter. If you write, please provide a telephone number and the most convenient time to call if we need to contact you.

Thank you for your cooperation.

Sincerely,

Marsha A. Ramirez

Non Profit Organization Operating Like a Commercial Business

ISSUE

Whether ORG, is operated exclusively for exempt purposes described within Internal Revenue Code section 501(c)(3):

Whether ORG is engaged primarily in activities that accomplish an exempt purpose?

Whether more than an insubstantial part of ORG's activities are in furtherance of a non-exempt purpose?

Whether ORG was operated for the purpose of serving a private benefit rather than public interest

Whether ORG conducted commercial activities in such a manner that these activities became its primary purposes?

FACTS

ORG (hereinafter "ORG") was incorporated on March 26, 19XX in the XYZ. ORG applied for exemption on June 15, 19XX.

The activities and operational information as described in the Form 1023 were:

To educate consumers on the proper use of credit, types of credit facilities available for different purposes, and to provide guidance on a monthly basis by way of cash flow analysis and budget planning so that creditors can be paid and at the same time reduced the incidences of bankruptcy so thousands of dollars can be kept in circulation.

To arouse the awareness of consumers to their rights as debtors in accordance with the fair debt collection practices as outlined by the Federal Trade Commission.

To work alongside consumers and the credit-granting community. To provide consumers nationwide who are financially distressed with a free debt repayment program which will enable them to meet their financial obligations while at the same time allowing them to cope with their monthly living expenses.

In the final determination letter dated September 3, 19XX, ORG was recognized as an organization exempt from federal income tax as described in IRC Section 501(c)(3). ORG was recognized as not a private foundation within the meaning of section 509(a) (1) and 170(b)(1)(A)(vi)

The main issue of contention is whether the current mode of operation by the exempt organization will preclude the tax exempt status of the organization. The total ORG's revenue for year ending March 31, 20XX, the year under audit, is $. This includes $ as fair-share payments from the creditors and $ as payments from clients who enrolled in the organization's debt management plans (DMP). There is no contribution from the general public or other governmental agencies. 52% came from the fair-share payments from the creditors and 48% of the gross revenue came from the client payments under DMP.

At present, in the year 20XX, the ORG operation is on a much smaller scale compared to the year under audit. The organization has four employees but only one employee is a credit counselor who receives a flat hourly rate. Based on conversations with both the president and POA, besides providing services in the form of Debt Management Programs, this organization does little else.

The board of directors does not represent a cross-section of the community served. It comprises of six people including the President, his sister, and his mother. His sister is also the Internal Auditor of the organization. His mother is also the Chief Finance Officer. The other three Board members are inactive. They only attend the Board meeting one a year.

LAW

Section 501(a) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that an organization described in section 501(c)(3) is exempt from income tax. Section 501(c)(3) of the Code exempts from federal income tax corporations organized and operated exclusively for charitable, educational, and other purposes, provided that no part of the net earnings inure to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual. The term charitable includes relief of the poor and distressed. See section 1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(2), Income Tax Regulations.

The term educational includes (a) instruction or training of the individual for the purpose of improving or developing his capabilities and (b) instruction of the public on subjects useful to the individual and beneficial to the community. Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(3). In other words, the two components of education are public education and individual training.

Section 1.501(c)(3)-1(a)(1) of the regulations provides that, in order to be exempt as an organization described in section 501(c)(3), an organization must be both organized and operated exclusively for one or more of the purposes specified in such section. If an organization fails to meet either the organizational test or the operational test, it is not exempt.

Section 1.501(c)(3)-1(c)(1) of the regulations provides that an organization will be regarded as "operated exclusively" for one or more exempt purposes only if it engages primarily in activities that accomplish one or more of such exempt purposes specified in section 501(c)(3). An organization will not be so regarded if more than an insubstantial part of its activities is not in furtherance of an exempt purpose. The existence of a substantial nonexempt purpose, regardless of the number or importance of exempt purposes, will cause failure of the operational test. Better Business Bureau of Washington, D.C. v. U.S., 326 U.S. 279 (1945).

Section 1.501(c)(3)-1(e)(1) of the regulations provides that an organization may meet the requirements of section 501(c)(3) although it operates a trade or business as a substantial part of its activities, if the operation of such trade or business is in furtherance of the organization's exempt purpose or purposes and if the organization is not organized or operated for the primary purposes of carrying on an unrelated trade or business.

In Better Business Bureau of Washington D.C., Inc. v. United States, 326 U.S. 279 (1945), the Supreme Court held that the presence of a single non-exempt purposes, if substantial in nature, will destroy the exemption regardless of the number or importance of truly exempt purposes. The Court found that the trade association had an "underlying commercial motive" that distinguished its educational program from that carried out by a university.

In American Institute for Economic Research v. United States, 302 F. 2d 934 (Ct. Cl. 1962), the Court considered the status of an organization that provided analyses of securities and industries and of the economic climate in general. The organization sold subscriptions to various periodicals and services providing advice for purchases of individual securities. Although the court noted that education is a broad concept, and assumed for the sake of argument that the organization had an educational purpose, it held that the organization had a significant non-exempt commercial purpose that was not incidental to the educational purpose and was not entitled to be regarded as exempt.

An organization must establish that it serves a public rather than a private interest and "that it is not organized or operated for the benefit of private interests such as designated individuals, the creator or his family, shareholders of the organization, or persons controlled, directly or indirectly, by such private interests." Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(1)(ii). Prohibited private interests include those of unrelated third parties as well as insiders. Christian Stewardship Assistance, Inc. v. Commissioner, 70 T.C. 1037 (1978); American Campaign Academy v. Commissioner, 92 T.C. 1053 (1989). Private benefits include an "advantage; profit; fruit; privilege; gain; [or] interest." Retired Teachers Legal Fund v. Commissioner, 78 T.C. 280, 286 (1982).

In B.S.W. Group, Inc. v. Commissioner, 70 T.C. 352 (1978), the court found that a corporation formed to provide consulting services was not exempt under section 501(c)(3) because its activities constituted the conduct of a trade or business that is ordinarily carried on by commercial ventures organized for profit. Its primary purpose was not charitable, educational, nor scientific, but rather commercial. The court found that the corporation had completely failed to demonstrate that its services were not in competition with commercial businesses. The court found that the organization's financing did not resemble that of the typical 501(c)(3) organization. It had not solicited, nor had it received, voluntary contributions from the public. Its only source of income was from fees from services, and those fees were set high enough to recoup all projected costs, and to produce a profit. Moreover, it did not appear that the corporation ever planned to charge a fee less than "cost." And finally, the corporation had failed to limit its clientele to organizations that were section 501(c)(3) exempt organizations.

An organization formed to educate people in Hawaii in the theory and practice of "est" was determined by the Tax Court to a part of a "franchise system which is operated for private benefit," and, therefore, should not be recognized as exempt under section 501(c)(3) of the Code. est of Hawaii v. Commissioner, 71 T.C. 1067, 1080 (1979). Although the organization was not formally controlled by the same individuals who controlled the for-profit entity that owned the license to the "est" body of knowledge, publications, and methods, the for-profit entity exerted considerable control over the applicant's activities by setting pricing, the number and frequency of different kinds of seminars and training, and providing the trainers and management personnel who are responsible to it in addition to setting price for the training. The court stated that the fact that the organization's rights were dependent upon its tax-exempt status showed the likelihood that the for-profit entities were trading on that status. The question for the court was not whether the payments made to the for-profit were excessive, but whether the for-profit entity benefited substantially from the operation of the organization. The court determined that there was a substantial private benefit because the organization "was simply the instrument to subsidize the for-profit corporations and not vice versa and had no life independent of those corporations."

Section 1.513-1(d)(4)(iv) of the regulations recognizes that in certain cases, activities carried on by an organization in the performance of exempt functions may generate good will or other intangibles, which may be exploited in commercial endeavors. Where an organization exploits such an intangible in commercial activities, the mere fact that the resultant income depends in part upon an exempt function of the organization does not make it gross income from related trade or business. In such cases, unless the commercial activities themselves contribute importantly to the accomplishment of an exempt purpose, the income, which they produce, is gross income from the conduct of unrelated trade or business. Example 7 of this section describes advertising by business firms in an exempt organization's journal that promotes only products that are within the general area of interest of the organization's members. The Example indicates that the advertising is not an educational activity of the kind contemplated by the exemption statute and that, therefore, the organization's publication of advertising does not contribute importantly to the accomplishment of its exempt purposes.

The Service has issued two rulings holding credit counseling organizations to be tax exempt. Rev. Rul. 65-299, 1965-2 C.B. 165, granted exemption to a 501(c)(4) organization whose purpose was to assist families and individuals with financial problems and to help reduce the incidence of personal bankruptcy. Its primary activity appears to have been meeting with people in financial difficulties to "analyze the specific problems involved and counsel on the payment of their debts." The organization also advised applicants on proration and payment of debts, negotiated with creditors and set up debt repayment plans. It did not restrict its services to the needy. It made no charge for the counseling services, indicating they were separate from the debt repayment arrangements. It made "a nominal charge" for monthly prorating services to cover postage and supplies. For financial support, it relied upon voluntary contributions from local businesses, lending agencies, and labor unions.

In Rev. Rul. 69-441, 1969-2 C.B. 115, the Service found that a nonprofit organization formed to help reduce personal bankruptcy by informing the public on personal money management and aiding low-income individuals and families with financial problems was exempt under section 501(c)(3) of the Code. Its Board of Directors was comprised of representatives from religious organizations, civic groups, labor unions, business groups, and educational institutions.

The organization provided information to the public on budgeting, buying practices, and the sound use of consumer credit through the use of films, speakers, and publications. It aided low-income individuals and families who have financial problems by providing them with individual counseling, and if necessary, by establishing budget plans. Under the budget plan, the debtor voluntarily made fixed payments to the organization, holding the funds in a trust account and disbursing the funds on a partial payment basis to the creditors. The organization did not charge fees for counseling services or proration services. The debtor received full credit against his debts for all amounts paid. The organization did not make loans to debtors or negotiate loans on their behalf. Finally, the organization relied upon contributions, primarily from the creditors participating in the organization's budget plans, for its support.

The Service found that, by aiding low-income individuals and families who have financial problems and by providing, without charge, counseling and a means for the orderly discharge of indebtedness, the organization was relieving the poor and distressed. Moreover, by providing the public with information on budgeting, buying practices, and the sound use of consumer credit, the organization was instructing the public on subjects useful to the individual and beneficial to the community. Thus, the organization was exempt from federal income tax under section 501(c)(3) of the Code.

In the case of Consumer Credit Counseling Service of Alabama, Inc. v. U.S., 44 A.F.T.R.2d 78-5052 (D.D.C. 1978), the District Court for the District of Columbia held that a credit counseling organization qualified as charitable and educational under section 501(c)(3). It fulfilled charitable purposes by educating the public on subjects useful to the individual and beneficial to the community. Treas. Reg. § 1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(3)(i)(b). For this, it charged no fee. The court found that the counseling programs were also educational and charitable; the debt management and creditor intercession activities were "an integral part" of the agencies' counseling function and thus were charitable and educational. Even if this were not the case, the court viewed the debt management and creditor intercession activities as incidental to the agencies' principal functions, as only approximately 12 percent of the counselors' time was applied to debt management programs and the charge for the service was "nominal." The court also considered the facts that the agency was publicly supported and that it had a board dominated by members of the general public as factors indicating a charitable operation. See also, Credit Counseling Centers of Oklahoma, Inc. v. United States, 79-2 U.S.T.C. 9468 (D.D.C. 1979), in which the facts and legal analysis were virtually identical to those in Consumer Credit Counseling Centers of Alabama, Inc. v. United States, discussed immediately above.

The organizations included in the above decision waived the monthly fees when the payments would work a financial hardship. The professional counselors employed by the organizations spent about 88 percent of their time in activities such as information dissemination and counseling assistance rather than those connected with the debt management programs. The participants in the DMP received full credit against their debts for the amounts paid. Moreover, the agencies charged a nominal fee of up to $10 per month for the DMP. This fee was waived in instances when payment of the fee would work a financial hardship. The primary sources of revenue for these organizations were provided by government and private foundation grants, contributions, and assistance from labor agencies and United Way.

Outside the context of credit counseling, individual counseling has, in a number of instances, been held to be a tax-exempt charitable activity. Rev. Rul. 78-99, 1978-1 C.B. 152 (free individual and group counseling of widows); Rev. Rul. 76-205, 1976-1 C.B. 154 (free counseling and English instruction for immigrants); Rev. Rul. 73-569, 1973-2 C.B. 179 (free counseling to pregnant women); Rev. Rul. 70-590, 1970-2 C.B. 116 (clinic to help users of mind-altering drugs); Rev. Rul. 70-640, 1970-2 C.B. 117 (free marriage counseling); Rev. Rul. 68-71, 1968-1 C.B.249 (career planning education through free vocational counseling and publications sold at a nominal charge). Overwhelmingly, the counseling activities described in these rulings were provided free, and the organizations were supported by contributions from the public.

Internal Revenue Code section 501(c)(3) specifies that an exempt organization described therein is one in which "no part of the net earnings inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual." The words "private shareholder or individual" in section 501 to refer to persons having a personal and private interest in the activities of the organization. Treas. Reg. § 1.501(a)-1(c). The inurement prohibition provision "is designed to prevent the siphoning of charitable receipts to insiders of the charity" United Cancer Council v. Commissioner, 165 F.3d 1173 (7th Cir. 19XX). Reasonable compensation does not constitute inurement. Birmingham Business College v. Commissioner, 276 F.2d 476, 480 (5th Cir. 1960).

Where an organization provided a source of credit to companies of which a private shareholder was either an employee or an owner, the court found that a portion of the organization's net earnings inured to the benefit of that private shareholder. Easter House v. United States, 12 Cl. Ct. 476 (1987). That such loans were made showed that the companies controlled by the private shareholder had a "source of loan credit" in the organization. In Easter House v. United States, 846 F. 2d 78 (Fed. Cir. 1988), aff'g 12 Cl.Ct. 476 (1987), the court found an organization that operated an adoption agency was not exempt under section 501(c)(3) of the Code because a substantial purpose of the adoption activity was a non-exempt commercial purpose. It found that the adoption services did not further the exempt purposes of providing educational and charitable services to the unwed mothers and children. Rather, the services for unwed mothers and children were merely provided "incident" to the organization's adoption service business. Moreover, the court found that "adoption services do not in and of themselves constitute an exempt purpose."

The court also agreed with the IRS' determination that the agency operated in a manner not "distinguishable from a commercial adoption agency" because it lacked the following traditional attributes of a charity. First, the agency's operation made substantial profits, and there was a substantial accumulation of capital surplus in comparison to direct expenditures by the agency for charitable and educational purposes. Second, the agency's operation was funded completely by substantial fixed fees charged adoptive parents. It relied entirely on those fees and sought no funds from federal, state or local sources, nor engaged in fund raising programs, nor did it solicit contributions. In fact, the agency had no plans, nor intention to seek contributions, government grants or engage in fund raising relative to its operations. Third, the fixed fees the agency charged adoptive parents were not subject to downward adjustment to meet potential adoptive parents' income or ability to pay. Fourth, the agency's single life member had near total control of the operations of the agency. And fifth, the agency functioned by means of a paid staff of 15 to 20 persons, with no volunteer help.

In addition to furthering a substantial non-exempt purpose, the court found that a portion of the organization's net earnings inured to the benefit of a private shareholder or individual as defined by sections 1.501(c)(3)-1(c)(2) and 1.501(a)-1(c) of the regulations. The organization provided a source of credit (i.e. loans) to companies in which the private shareholder was either employed by or owned. The fact that the loans were made showed that the companies controlled by the private shareholder had a "source of loan credit" in the organization.

In P.L.L. Scholarship v. Commissioner, 82 T.C. 196 (1984), an organization operated bingo at a bar for the avowed purpose of raising money for scholarships. The board included the bar owners, the bar's accountant, also a director of the bar, as well as two players. The board was self-perpetuating. The court reasoned that, because the bar owners controlled the organization and appointed the organization's directors, the activities of the organization could be used to the advantage of the bar owners. The organization claimed that it was independent because there was separate accounting and no payments were going to the bar. The court was not persuaded. A realistic look at the operations of these two entities, however, shows that the activities of the taxpayer and the Pastime Lounge were so interrelated as to be functionally inseparable. Separate accountings of receipts and disbursements do not change that fact. The court went on to conclude that, because the record did not show that the organization was operated for exempt purposes, but rather indicates that it benefited private interests, exemption was properly denied.

In Church By Mail, Inc. v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo 1984-349, aff'd 765 F. 2d 1387 (9th Cir. 1985) the tax court found that a church was operated with a substantial purpose of providing a market for an advertising and mailing company owned by the same people who controlled the church. The church argued that the contracts between the two were reasonable, but the Court of Appeals pointed out that "the critical inquiry is not whether particular contractual payments to a related for-profit organization are reasonable or excessive, but instead whether the entire enterprise is carried on in such a manner that the for-profit organization benefits substantially from the operation of the Church."

The Credit Repair Organizations Act (CROA), 15 U.S.C. § 1679 et seq., effective April 1, 19XX, imposes restrictions on credit repair organizations, including forbidding the making of untrue or misleading statements and forbidding advance payment, before services are fully performed. 15 U.S.C. § 1679b. Significantly, section 501(c)(3) organizations are excluded from regulation under the CROA.

The CROA defines a credit repair organization as:

any person who uses any instrumentality of interstate commerce or the mails to sell, provide, or perform (or represent that such person can or will sell, provide, or perform) any service, in return for the payment of money or other valuable consideration, for the express or implied purpose of—

- (i) improving any consumer's credit record, credit history, or credit rating, or
- (ii) providing advice or assistance to any consumer with regard to any activity or service described in clause (i).

15 U.S.C. § 1679a(3). The courts have interpreted this definition broadly to apply to credit counseling agencies. The Federal Trade Commission's policy is that if an entity communicates with consumers in any way about the consumers' credit situation, it is providing a service covered by the CROA. In Re National Credit Management Group, LLC, 21 F. Supp. 2d 424, 458 (N.D.N.J. 19XX).

Businesses are prohibited from cold-calling consumers who have put their phone numbers on the National Do-Not-Call Registry, which is maintained by the Federal Trade Commission. 16 C.F.R. § 310.4(b)(1)(iii)(B); 47 C.F.R. § 64.1200(c)(2). Section 501(c)(3) organizations are not subject to this rule against cold-calling. Because 501(c)(3) organizations are exempt from regulation under the CROA and the cold-calling restrictions, organizations that are involved in credit repair have added incentives to be recognized as section 501(c)(3) organizations even if they do not intend to operate primarily for exempt purposes.

TAXPAYER'S POSITION

The organization consents to the proposed revocation.

GOVERNMENT'S POSITION

does not meet the operational test, because more than an insubstantial part of its activities are commercial in nature. By definition, IRC section 501(c)(3) organizations will only qualify for tax exempt status if it is organized and operated exclusively for charitable purposes. Thus, to meet the requirement, it is necessary for an organization to establish that it is not organized or operated for the benefit of private interests. is operating in a commercial manner which is not an exempt activity described under Internal Revenue Code section 501(c)(3). The entire revenue stream is from debt management plan and fair share payments from creditors. No charity payment from general public or any governmental agencies. The board of directors of the organization is not represented by the community. The board is a small group of individuals including the president of the organization, his mother, and his sister.

The current operation of the organization appears to be nothing more than the maintenance of the client base on the debt management plan and collecting the regular monthly fee.

This activity is not in furtherance of the educational purposes within the meaning of IRC §501(c)(3)

CONCLUSION

In the case of ORG, it is held that, where the primary purpose or activity of the credit counseling agency is the maintenance of debt management plans for customers, it is not entitled to exemption from Federal income tax as an organization described in section 501(c)(3) of the Code. Ruling and determination letters which have been issued granting exemption from income tax under section 501(c)(3) of the Code to such organization should be revoked, effective April 1, 20XX.
